macOS Mac OS 10.6 (Snow Leopard) includes some very cool features, including TrueType fonts and OpenType fonts. Unfortunately, the technology doesn't work quite the same as in Windows and isn't compatible with .NET. With the release of Mac OS X 10.7 (Lion), Apple introduced a new and very powerful technology called Quick Look. This technology lets you "look" at a graphics file without having to install any third-party software. To use it, right-click or Control-click a file, and choose Quick Look from the context menu. You also can drag and drop the file into a Finder window, which will also open the file in Quick Look. ## Appendix A. Choosing an Editor Application Take a look at your favorite software program to

Q: How to check from within the target database if there are certain tables with certain names? I need to know for certain if a certain database contains certain tables (user-specified). I can easily do this by simply looping through the tables in the target database and either count them up, or try to SELECT them. The problem is that this involves user-permission to access the database, so it's something I'd rather not do. I don't know the names of any of the tables I might run this query against, but I know the database is small (less than 100 tables). I'm currently using Sql 2000 but willing to upgrade if necessary. A: if you know the database, the table names are part of the name.. why not build a query that gives you that info? SELECT db.[name], tbl.[name] FROM sys.tables tbl JOIN sys.databases db ON db.[name]= tbl.[database_id] A: This is how you can get the names of tables in your database from within the target database: SELECT * FROM INFORMATION_SCHEMA.TABLES WHERE TABLE_SCHEMA = 'database_that_contains_your_table' SQL Server provides the INFORMATION_SCHEMA.TABLES table to query the names of tables, views, stored procedures, functions, user-defined types and triggers. After impressing, the now-Liverpool manager Bill Shankly promised him a transfer to Liverpool on his return from Manchester United for the start of the following season. Stein turned down Liverpool in order to join Celtic, and the promise of a transfer was later fulfilled after Shankly was appointed manager of Celtic. Celtic After 5 goals in 22 appearances for Celtic in his debut season, Stein was able to impress Shankly again, and he made his debut for Celtic in the 1941-42 season. Stein
